"The South 40"

The first feeder sale of the fall season started on a high note -- 39 1/4C for the first pen. These calves averaged 381 pounds.

1420 head were marketed last Thursday. Generally producers were all smiles.

The second sale will be on October 23. More than 100 calves have been consigned by Appomattox producers. Consignors are: J. L. Harrison, Patrick Lair, J. A. Martin, O. W. Martin, Jr., T. R. Martin, Jr. and Stuart Farrar.

In 1968 a sampling of Virginia flue and burley producers provided data to determine if there was a difference in marketing cost between large and small producers.

As you might expect, the large producers with 10 to 20 acre realized a saving of about 50¢ per hundred weight. This was possible because more pounds of tobacco was put on a basket.

Henry Covington and LeGrand Webb visited the Orange Experiment Station last week. They had hoped to see some of the new corn varieties but a heavy rain limited their observation.

Carolee oats will be dropped from the recommended list in 1970.

Among barley varieties to be discontinued are Colonial #2 and James.

Wakeland wheat will also not appear on the recommended list next year.

Barsoy will be added to the recommended barley variety list.

The advantage of Barsoy is its standability and earliness. Barsoy is about 7 days earlier than Hanover and 10 days earlier than Wong. The standability is probably not as good as Jefferson, but better than Wong or Hanover. Barsoy is a bearded variety and does have good winter hardiness, although where earliness is not so important the newer varieties will outyield it.

Most high school juniors and seniors have or are in the process of making up their minds on the question — Shall I go to college?

The demand for graduates in horticulture are greater than the supply. Qualified and well-trained young people who understand the production of fruits, vegetables, ornamentals and flowers are needed.

This fall there are five young ladies studying horticulture at VPI.

There are some grants-in-aid for those who are interested in horticulture, who need assistance and have demonstrated their ability in high school.

There is a brochure available on this subject -- ask us for one if you are interested.

Flue Tobacco producers will want to see the regional small plot and farm tests of tobacco at Old Holland Warehouse in Danville.

This tobacco can be seen all day Wednesday, October 22.

Surprise On Skyline

Linwood and Teresa Elliott of Appomattox found a new friend on the Skyline Drive at the Crimora Lake Outlook. As they stopped to admire the view this friendly fawn stopped, too. They and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliott, ate picnic lunch at Lewis Mountain, then traveled on to Luray. With leaves turning color and beautiful weather for sightseeing Sunday they could only agree that the day was almost perfect because of the friendly little fawn who must sense that children and young animals were meant to be friends.

Hereford News In 5th Edition

The fifth edition of the Virginia Polled Hereford News has just been published. Editor is James D. Bennett, of Red House, with printing done at the Times-Virginia.

Of chief news to raisers, presumably is the first consignment sale of 60 bulls and heifers by 20 Polled Hereford breeders throughout the Old Dominion, a sale set for Oct. 13 in Culpeper.

The four-page newspaper contains general news of interest to VPHA members and specific information on animals ready for immediate sale.

Reid Putney is secretary of the VPHA. Foster Reynolds, of Red House, is a VPHA representative and county "contact man" for those with Polled Hereford needs and problems.
